VBS thank you

This past week, our parish hosted our annual Vacation Bible School for the children. I am inspired by how many of our youth helped in leadership roles for the younger children (K-5th grade). Our Faith Formation Director, Jane Dotson, always does a great job keeping our youth involved and training them to be leaders in sharing their own faith. Two things come to mind for all of us to remember and practice:

Children love bible stories - Parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles have a privilege and responsibility to make time to read bible stories to our children and listen to their questions and insights. Particularly stories of Jesus' miracles and care for the poor inspire the children to become better disciples themselves.

Keeping our youth involved – We work hard here at St. Clare to always encourage the youth (5th-12th grades) to get involved in ministries, both at Mass and in our outreach services. Thanks to all parents who challenge their young people to sign up for ministries and help transport them to activities to stay involved. Statistics prove that kids who stay active in their parish and see their parents involved in parish ministries have a much higher rate of 'remaining Catholic' in their adult years.

Thanks to all our parents and grandparents who make the extra effort to model and teach their children about staying close to Jesus by staying close to their parish and the sacraments.

God bless you,
Fr. Jim Deiters

Faith and Poverty: A Biblical Response

Ready to learn about how the Church approaches the issue of poverty from a Biblical perspective? Join our JustFaith reading and discussion group this Fall. JustFaith is an 8-9 week program that includes some reading, 1.5 hour weekly sessions which include prayer and discussion, and a field trip/service opportunity.

Depending on the number of people participating, the expected cost is around $35. Sessions will be on Sundays beginning September 12 from 6:30-8 p.m. A Thursday evening option might also be available depending on interest.

Contact Deacon John Gomez (deaconjohn@stclarechurch.org) to sign up, more information or to request financial assistance with the program cost. Registration deadline is August 30 to allow for us to order materials on time.

Blood Drive Thank You

Thank you to our blood donors for the ImpactLife Blood Drive we held in July. We reached our goal and were able to obtain a grant to help pay for textbooks at St. Clare School.

The next drive at St. Clare Church will be Tuesday, February 1 from 3—7 p.m.

How are Bishops Selected

On behalf of our entire diocese, I congratulate Father John Iffert on the good news that our Holy Father has appointed him the 11th Bishop of Covington in Kentucky. I thank Pope Francis for appointing such a pastoral, compassionate and dedicated priest to the office of bishop. Father Iffert was ordained a priest for the Diocese of Belleville by Bishop Wilton Gregory in 1997 and has been a terrific shepherd to many people ever since. We will miss Bishop-elect Iffert, but trust that this is the work of the Holy Spirit and for the good of souls.

With this good news there can also come some questions. One of which is simply: how are Catholic bishops appointed? As many readers know, the Catholic faith has spread over the world and the Church is organized in units named dioceses. A diocese is a geographic territory which has a diocesan bishop appointed as shepherd for the clergy and faithful who live in that geographic area. There is usually an “archdiocese” in a region along with several dioceses nearby that are connected with the archdiocese. An archdiocese has an archbishop as the local shepherd, and a diocese has a bishop who presides over the local community.

When a diocese becomes vacant, such as when the bishop is retiring or dies in office, the Holy See begins a process of searching for a successor. In many nations, the Holy Father has a representative (the exact term is “papal nuncio”) who is an archbishop and a diplomat, who interacts with the church in that country and also represents the Holy See to the nation’s government. In the case of the United States, Archbishop Christophe Pierre, a native of France, is the papal nuncio. It would be Archbishop Pierre who would coordinate the process of surfacing the names of priests in our country who could be considered for the office of bishop.

Archbishops and bishops are normally the ones who suggest to the nuncio names of priests who could be considered for the role of bishop. The nuncio may then choose to vet a priest by confidentially consulting with bishops, priests, deacons, religious and lay people who would know a priest well enough to offer some insight into his suitability for the episcopacy. The process involves 25-30 people who receive a questionnaire and then return the completed document to the nuncio. All of this is in absolute confidence so that people can be as honest and forthright as possible in their responses. This may surprise you, but the priest is usually unaware that he is under consideration.

Finally, the names of three priests who might be suitable for a vacant diocese are presented by the nuncio to the Congregation for Bishops in Rome. This congregation, led by Cardinal Marc Ouellet, consists of 20 or so cardinals and bishops who meet every two weeks to consider the candidates who have been nominated. The members of the congregation consider the needs of a diocese and the qualities of the priests; the congregation members then vote and a list of three names (in order of first, second and third recommendation) is completed. Cardinal Ouellet then brings all of the information to the Holy Father for review and discussion. The Pope alone makes the decision of appointing a bishop. He may choose any of the three candidates or, in some cases, the Pope may ask for a different list of names (which means the process may take longer while a new list is created). Once the Holy Father makes his decision about the appointment of a new bishop, the decision is communicated to the papal nuncio who then contacts the priest who has been nominated. The priest may either say yes and accept the nomination to the episcopacy or he may decline (for instance, a priest may have a serious medical issue that no one knows about and he declines due to his health).

Once a priest accepts the Pope’s appointment as a bishop, the priest cannot tell anyone until there is an official announcement. The nuncio will coordinate with the new bishop and diocese receiving a new bishop an appropriate date for an announcement of the appointment. In the case of Bishop-elect Iffert, the announcement was made on July 13 in Rome and Washington D.C., with subsequent press releases in Covington and Belleville. A date is then set for the new bishop’s ordination; we look forward to the ordination of Bishop-elect Iffert on Thursday, September 30, in Covington.

I hope that this column is helpful to our readers in understanding this important process. The goal is to identify a good priest who can fulfill the bishop’s mission to teach, govern and sanctify. I hope that people are encouraged that the process involves consultation with the laity: parishioners, trustees, parish council members, and others, so that the best possible candidate emerges. Please pray for Bishop-elect Iffert and all of our bishops, that we can live with integrity as successors of the apostles and be good shepherds of the Lord’s flock entrusted to our care.

In our Lord,
Bishop Michael McGovern, bmcgovern@diobelle.org

7:00 p.m. Solemn Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament followed by night prayers and Compline
7:30 p.m. The Novena Service concluding with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament

- Aug 2 Pattern of Prayer, Pattern of Life O Our Father Most Holy: Our Creator, Redeemer, Consoler, and Savior He is the Father of Mercies to Whom St. Clare turned in every need, and was never confounded.
- Aug 3 Who Art In Heaven Looking to the all-good Father in heaven enabled St. Clare to reflect the light of His goodness to all whose lives touched hers on earth.
- Aug 4 Hallowed be Thy Name! St. Clare allowed the Father to hollow out a place in her soul so that she could be filled with the holiness of God. Thus, in joy or sorrow, she, like Mary, could pray; The almighty has done great things for me; Holy is His Name!
- Aug 5 Thy Kingdom Come! St. Clare invites us to believe and to hope that we may be able to see the manifestations of this Kingdom and the nearness of its King, around us and within us.
- Aug 6 Thy Will be Done! The mystery of Christ’s redemptive obedience made St. Clare’s prayer a powerhouse of grace. She journeys with us as we make this prayer, knowing that in His Will is our peace.
- Aug 7 Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread! For St. Clare, this petition was the humble cry of someone who depended on God for everything. And ultimately, it is her cry for the Eucharist, the Bread of Life for which we long and by which we live.
- Aug 8 And Forgive us...as we Forgive St. Clare teaches that in forgiving others, we are prepared to receive the greatest of gifts...the Father’s forgiveness.
- Aug 9 And Lead us Not into Temptation, hidden or obvious, sudden or persistent. But Deliver Us from Evil, past, present and to come. St. Clare used the weapons of prayer and humility to conquer temptation.
- Aug 10 Amen! In life and in death, St. Clare was aware that she would not pronounce her “Amen” alone. Christ Himself would take up and complete her “Amen” to the Father.
