It will soon be installed on a wall and it contains a portable unit which can be removed and transported to where it is needed in the church or the hall. We would like to train numerous people to use it and are looking for folks who (a) attend Mass and parish functions frequently and (b) would be willing to administer aid with this device should the need arise. Please call the parish office and leave a message that you would like to receive training. You will then be notified of the date & time.

Confession before Communion

Part of Sacramental Confession is the Act of Contrition. Contrition is sorrow for having sinned. True sorrow can only come from true, perfect love because sorrow is an expression of love, and it heals and restores love.

But a popular movie from the 1970s would have us believe that "love means never having to say you're sorry." Hogwash! Any married person know how false that claim is!

The practical reality of love is that when one person hurts another, there needs to be reconciliation before love can be healed. It is absurd to presume that someone can hurt others and then relate with them as if nothing happened! There is grave injury, the healing of which only the person who did the hurting can bring about.

This is true if we hurt God (which is sin), and then we try coming to Holy Communion without having told God that we are sorry, that is the same absurdity of what I just described. There needs to be reconciliation first before there can be actual communion. And just as if I who did the hurting went around as if nothing happened only serves to deepen and worse the hurts that I have caused, so if we try going to Holy Communion in a state of mortal sin as if we have done no wrong and have committed no sin only serves to deepen and worsen the hurts that we have caused against God (in this instance, the sin of sacrilege).

Maybe we express in our hearts that we are sorry for having sinned, and that might get us right with the Lord alone; it does not get us right with His Body, the Church. A sin is always a public act; it is never truly private. The Sacrament of Reconciliation gets us right with the Lord and restores us to full communion with His Body, the Church. We need to have both of these relationships healed and restored if we are to be in full communion in order to receive Holy Communion.

There are some particular categories of sins that seem to be more frequently problematic for people in our own day and age, and what follows is not my own personal opinion but in fact is the teaching of Christ and His Church.

One: skipping the Sunday Mass. Note that this is not merely missing Mass; we can validly miss Mass if we are too sick to attend, unavoidably detained from attending (for example, during a particularly bad snow storm). But skipping Mass connotes that you could have gone to Mass but chose not to, that you could have made it but decided to sleep in instead, or go skiing, or go golfing, or whatever.

Two: sexual sins. Sins against chastity are very serious, and among the most common sins in this category are pornography and masturbation, sexual activity before or outside of marriage, and the use of contraception.

Three: gossip. Sins of the tongue are perhaps the easiest to commit and, in many ways, are among the most damaging. People's reputations are wounded, maybe permanently, because of gossip, slander, detraction, and other such sins of the tongue.

There are many other serious sins, of course. But we must remember that this is all teaching about God's love for us and our love for God. It is about forgiveness, reconciliation, and communion. We must come to Christ in the proper order: we approach God in a worthy and holy manner, and the good and worthy times in our life of receiving Holy Communion will bring us to the eternal glory of life everlasting.
