

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

Andrew "Drew" Wisniewski: This weekend is the last weekend for Drew in the parish. He has done an extraordinary job as a summer seminarian. During his time here, Drew has assisted at all of our Masses, visited the homebound, helped to run the Wild Goose series on the Holy Spirit, met numerous parishioners, wrote an impressive weekly bulletin article, and the list goes on. He is a fine candidate to the priesthood and his presence has been a blessing and encouragement for me. Please remember Drew in your prayers as he returns to the Pontifical College Josephinum to begin his first year of theology and to continue his discernment regarding his call to priesthood.

Rectory Update: Some of you may have heard that we began a summer monastery at Blessed Sacrament rectory. The rumors were true. When Fr. Dave Sizemore, the new pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church, began his assignment this July, he moved into Blessed Sacrament rectory with the summer seminarian at St. Francis. For several weeks in July, I hosted three guests in the rectory. The reason why Fr. Dave moved in is that a building review of the St. Francis rectory indicated that it was not safe for habitation (due to wiring concerns). Since arriving, and after consulting with his parish, Fr. Dave has decided to renovate his rectory. He will be our guest for the duration of the St. Francis rectory renovation. I am very grateful that we renovated the upstairs of the rectory, so we as a parish were able to offer our guests comfortable accommodations in three newly renovated rooms. When Fr. Dave finishes his rectory renovation, I plan on starting the downstairs renovation of the Blessed Sacrament rectory. During that time, I will move in to the St. Francis rectory.

Financial Peace University: This weekend, we will be announcing a new program that will begin in September and be run on Sunday evenings this fall. The program, Financial Peace University, is a tested and biblically based program to help families work on proper budgeting. I have sensed the need for this for some time and I hope that many of our families will participate as a way of learning new budgeting tools that will help to reduce the stress associated with finances. I am very grateful for Dan and Carol Steele, who will be driving up from Lancaster to run the program for us. Please consider this great opportunity!

First Day of School: This week, we begin another school year! I am looking forward to our first day of classes on Wednesday, August 23rd. Our first school Mass will be on Wednesday at 10:00 a.m. (the usual 9:00 a.m. Mass will be moved to 10:00 a.m. for the first day). Welcome to our new students and welcome back to all of our returning students!

Festival Time! Our Festival will be on August 26th, from 5:00-11:00 p.m. A reminder that our Saturday Mass time will be moved on the Festival day to 4:00 p.m. Plan on attending and bring your friends and family!

Sunday Mass times: A reminder that our new schedule for Sunday Masses will begin on September 16-17. Our Masses will be Saturdays at 5:00 p.m., Sundays at 8:00 a.m., 10:45 a.m., and 5:00 p.m.

In Christ, Fr. Wilson

Check your calendar and look for an hour for Jesus. *Adoration hours: Monday, Noon-8:00 p.m.; Tuesday, 5:00-6:00 p.m.; Wednesday, 10:00 a.m.-midnight. # Two Spiritual Resources Before I Depart

I write this final letter with a great sense of gratitude for all of the parishioners of Blessed Sacrament parish. I have been touched by the kindness, generosity, and warmth that many of you have shown to me. I am truly appreciative. So, as my time at Blessed Sacrament comes to an end, I would like to share some spiritual resources that have benefited me over the last few years. It is my most sincere hope that these will be efficacious for you and your families as you continue to be renewed in love for the Holy Spirit. Just as in life, we have times where we need to depart to a better place, job, relationship etc., so too, in the spiritual life there are points of departure whereby we can move to a new understanding of how we can know God, love God and live out our vocation. What follows are a couple of books that have made a huge impact on me.

Henri Nouwen, was a well-known writer and spiritual director. Fr. Nouwen saw the struggles that were prevalent in the generation that was coming to age in the tumultuous times of the Vietnam War and the hippy movement. His writing is still very prescient in our own time as we see many people who struggle with father wounds, loneliness, etc. Fr. Nouwen's best known book is the Wounded Healer; in it Father Nouwen speaks of how we address our woundedness, take those experiences and let them be a source of healing for others. One story that he recounts is that of a seminary student who was visiting a man who was facing death. The man was a farm labourer who knew nothing but the fields. The seminary student, with his best intentions tried to comfort the man and let him know that everything would be okay. However, what the seminarian failed to notice was that as the man spoke, he subtly showed that he had no human connection to come home to. The man only had the fields and the labour to look forward to. The point that Nouwen makes is that human persons long for relationships; we all want to know that someone is waiting for us. In the case of the dying man, he needed to know that even in death, someone was waiting for him!

In our day-to-day lives, most, if not all of us have felt that we have no one to come to. The reality is that many people, including devoted churchgoers struggle with great loneliness. There are a variety of reasons for these hurts, but Nouwen encourages his readers to be a source of affirmative healing for others. The Christian life is not about never suffering, really it's the contrary; our struggles allow for our victory, moreover, they allow us to bring others to victory as well. I have often found that the best way to address my times of loneliness is to spend time serving others and offering my prayers for them. The Josephinum allows its seminarians a number of opportunities to feed and spend time with the homeless. These moments have been a wonderful source of healing for me because they have gotten me further out of my comfort zone, have reminded me of my blessings, have allowed me to develop relationships with the homeless communities and have let me be [in some small way] a source of comfort for some of these folks. While I cannot relate to being homeless, the reality is that these people don't care about that; they want someone to listen and care about them. Isn't that what we all really want? So often when we feel a deep loneliness or depression, it usually begins with a sense that we are not cared about, which results in a feeling that we aren't worthy of being cared about, which just perpetuates a vicious cycle. Yet our souls are relational precisely because God is relational, thus our souls are fed by feeding others. Wallowing in self-pity gets one nowhere, while seeing our wounds and using them as a source of understanding and presence with others allows for the healing power of the Holy Spirit to flow in and through us.

Two Spiritual Resources Before I Depart

Conrad Barrs was a Dutch Catholic psychiatrist who wrote a number of books and pamphlets on affirmation. One of them is the second book that has made an impact on me. That one is Healing the Unaffirmed. This book addressed a condition that Dr Barrs and his colleague Anna Terruwe discovered in the late 1950's called "Emotional Deprivation Disorder." The basic thesis is that many people have never been genuinely affirmed in the humanity; they have often been told [often implicitly] that love or salvation has to be earned. Many Americans struggle with seeing themselves in economic terms, as only being good if they can be productive or useful. This mentality breeds many of our social ills (i.e. abortion, euthanasia, suicide, racial/political animosity, etc.) and is wholly contrary to the Gospel. Every human person has inestimable value; Christ showed us that time and again, such as when He confronted the Pharisees who wanted to stone the prostitute or by revealing His resurrected self to Mary Magdelene before any of the disciples.

Being a former worker in a large corporation, I had deadlines to meet, tasks to accomplish, and so on. These all affected my pay and ultimately my being considered a "good employee." Often in relationships, I felt that I had to please everyone and, in a sense, be "useful" to others in order to have their friendship and affirmation. Thinking in this way almost certainly leads to being excessively self-critical, worrying unnecessarily and not utilizing the talents and personality that our LORD has graced us with. This ultimately makes living one's vocation all but impossible, at least in terms of living it joyfully! We, as human persons, made in the relational image of God need affirmation of our dignity and value. The takeaway for me was seeing the signs a person who is not properly affirmed bears, learning how to see these in myself and most importantly, how to start recognizing the signs in others. Dr. Barrs helped further my understanding of how to meet people where they are at, and Henri Nouwen, how to see woundedness not as a shame or a pity, but as a source of healing and strength.

Again, it has been a true joy to have spent this summer with so many of you! You have all blessed me in countless ways! I can say with all sincerity that I will be returning to the Josephinum with much joy in my heart. On that note, I would love to host any parishioners who would like to attend a Mass and take a tour of the Josephinum. We have a solemn holy Hour with Lauds and Benediction beginning at 9:00 a.m. and Mass at 10:15 a.m. These are not public, but we are always able to accommodate guests. It would truly be an honour for me to host any of you! Finally, if I can be of any assistance to anyone, I am but an email away. You can reach me at andrew.wisniewski@live.com. As always, may we all be blessed in all that we do and may we use those blessings for the building up of the Kingdom.
