Little Flower Catholic High School for Girls

To the Little Flower Community,

"The person who is trustworthy in very small matters is also trustworthy in great ones." (Luke 16:10)

As we conclude our first full week of school, I find myself contemplating this verse. It reminds me of Saint Thérèse-small acts of kindness and everyday tasks should be done with love. Our Little Flower community completed their first full week of school and many, many moments were filled with love, kindness, and trust. I saw our upperclassmen help freshmen and transfer students locate a room and help with locker combinations. Students invited each other to sit with them at the cafeteria tables and sort through the best candy at the Flossie Shop. On Thursday evening, I overheard families connecting in the hallways with each other about carpooling and uniform exchange. As we concluded Back to School night, mothers, sisters, and classmates sang the alma mater in our gorgeous auditorium. Our students are very strong and talented. Our families are loving and determined. So many acts of kindness, love, and trust remind me that this gift of a Little Flower education is valuable and sacred.

This is the second full week of school. A quiz here, an essay there, and many Physics problems for review. Students are being challenged to focus on the details of their assignments; the small matters that will reveal importance later in the unit. Our freshmen are engaged in a new learning management system, our sophomores might be in their first year of a World Language, our Juniors are balancing many electives, and our seniors are writing their college essays. Our students are balancing a lot, but "The person who is trustworthy in very small matters is also trustworthy in great ones." (Luke 16:10) Effort and consistency carry weight. This is not just about trust in someone else, but trust in yourself and your God-given potential. We ask our students and families to trust themselves and know how much the Little Flower community values their presence and impact.

Thank you for a wonderful first week. I am looking forward to the days ahead.

Have a safe and blessed week,
Kathleen Thérèse Radebaugh
