From the Administrator

Fr. David Poecking

This Sunday's gospel presumes that our institutional life in the Church is the context for all our shared life and love as the community of Jesus' disciples. From time to time over the centuries, it has become fashionable to scorn "institutional religion," but let us recall that Our Lord intentionally institutionalized discipleship. While I'm grateful for all who follow Jesus, even those who do so in a free-spirited manner, to follow Jesus wholeheartedly requires us to cultivate the institutional life of the Church.

Thus for Catholic Christians, the institution of the parish is normally and normatively where they can complete their experience of following Jesus: maturing in faith, receiving the sacraments, sharing responsibility with their clergy for the service of the community. I've now lived at Regina Coeli Parish (RCP) for nearly two months, and I now report some of my initial observations and experiences of the parish.

The faithful at RCP have a strong sense of the importance of Sunday worship. The lay liturgical ministers—musicians, readers, altar servers, sacristans, ushers—are usually highly dedicated to their service. Most Masses in fulfillment of the Sunday obligation are well-attended and worshipers participate vigorously. Many have a healthy appreciation for their favorite Mass times or locations, even if this appreciation sometimes gets expressed in less healthy ways, such as a defensiveness around their own preferences for how and when Mass is celebrated.

RCP also boasts a lively diversity of opportunities in faith formation. We have a longstanding and exemplary implementation of the Catechesis of the Good Shepherd, which many consider to be a best practice in children's faith formation. But we also offer parents choices in family catechesis, also highly respected, or in more conventional classroom-style religious education. Teens and adults are not neglected, as they, too, have several opportunities to continue learning.

The parish bulletin is filled with invitations to service. From Brother André's Café and the Appalachia Mission to Stephen Ministry and Mary's Gate, meeting along the way the Ladies' Auxiliary, the Women's Guild, and the Ladies of Charity, there are just too many initiatives for me to get a complete catalogue in this column. As our relatively new diocesan shepherd, Bishop Eckman has been calling the entire Church of Pittsburgh to reinvigorated works of mercy, and RCP sets a high bar especially in this regard.

So I thank you all for the ways in which you are sustaining the life of this institution—faith, worship, and service—and thus bearing witness to all the ways in which the Lord Jesus has called us to follow him.

—Fr. Dave

Poetry from Fr. Aaron

I am glad for the opportunity to share poems I've written in the bulletin a few times a month and hope you are inspired by them in some way. As we as God's people will observe the nativity of our Blessed Mother Mary on September 8th, may we reflect on how God chose her to be the perfect person to be the mother of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

-Fr. Aaron

Obedient One

Mary, how favored are you—the daughter of Ann your mother, Joachim your father who by God's hand brought you into the world to grow and develop into the pure girl who would honor your parents in the way you would give them respect and their will obey. How fitting, then, for you to be the one God would choose to be the mother of His Son.

In your desire to say "yes," humanity again the Father would bless. Jesus Christ would show the world how to live by His example to share, love and forgive.

Teach us with Jesus to love and respect our most loving Father and ever select His will for us and with God find favor and be in heaven with you and our Savior.
