Rhinebeck blew it's stack two weeks ago about this sign and it's already gone...

I think it's a good thing but could you imagine if we removed other distasteful or harmful spiritual things in our lives that quickly? You can...confession!

Some helpful starting points to ask yourself...Is God really first in my life? Do I make career, reputation, busy-ness or my opinions the operative God in my life? Do I pray seriously for quality time each day? Do I know what the voice of God sounds like in my prayer? Do I use His name poorly, or joke, tempt or treat Him like an add-on in my life rather than it's center? Since my last confession do I skip Mass without a real serious reason? Am I prepared and focused to the best of my ability at Mass? What is my family life like? Are there longstanding grudges, do I care for my kids or my parents in a truly Christian way. If my parents are sick or homebound do I make arrangements for them spiritually as well as medically? Do I show my children love? Am I always giving advice? Am I careless with my duty as a Catholic parent? Do I pray with my children? Do I let my children walk all over me? Have I ever taken someone's life? Have I harmed another person seriously? Have I helped others to do away with someone because of threats or convenience? In thoughts or deeds do I engage in sins of impurity? Cheated on a spouse in person or online? Do I owe anyone a large amount of money with no thought of repaying? Do I cheat on taxes? Do I give to God what is right or am I stingy with God? As an employee do I give an honest days work? As a boss do I exploit my workers or make unreasonable demands? Do I lie, gossip, spread truth to hurt people? Am I sinfully envious of others life, possessions, marriage or lifestyle? All of these are sometimes all too common and create a barrier we make ourselves to others and God. Don't worry about the act of contrition, be clear, be sorry and open yourself to the love, forgiveness and mercy of God—look below for times and churches.

Give a thought to bringing yourself closer to the Lord and perhaps go deeper—especially if you were never confirmed, or are Catholic, or married in the Church. Forums like RCIA can help us to grow in our spiritual lives by helping to forge a stronger foundation in Christ through the fullness of the Faith as a Catholic.
