WHY DO CATHOLICS DO THAT...?

Praying with the Psalms

The Psalms are Israel's religious poetry and song. They express the people's very real and concrete experiences of God. The Psalms are filled with the same wide range of feelings and moods that we experience in our lives today. The people who wrote the Psalms poured out their hearts to God in words of joy and sorrow, regret and celebration, earnest pleadings and praise. These are the prayers of people who struggled to live righteous lives.

There are many different kinds of Psalms. There are psalms of lament, which express the anguish and sorrow experienced in illness, death, and personal loss. There are psalms of thanksgiving and rejoicing, which recognize God's hand when the people are rescued from evil or wickedness. There are psalms of praise to a majestic God, witnessed in all of creation.

The Book of Psalms serves as a common book of prayer for Jews and Christians. As Catholics we use psalms at Mass, the Liturgy of the Hours, and many other times when we gather for prayer. Because they address feelings and experiences common to all, they speak to us today just as strongly as they did to the people who first used them thousands of years ago.

Saint Athanasius advised us to hear the Psalms as being addressed to us, as believers in the present. So read Psalms slowly and reverently, savoring each word as if God is saying it for the first time. You will gain deeper insight if you read the Psalms this way.

When you read the Psalms, look for their rhythm and repetition. Just as modern music and poetry use rhythm and repetition to emphasize certain things, so the Psalms use rhythm and repetition to emphasize their authors' keen insights into our relationship with God. Perhaps you will share the experience of Saint Ambrose who once said, "When I am reading divine Scripture God walks again in the earthly Paradise."

Become an Extraordinary Minister of Holy Communion

Have you ever felt called to serve during Mass in a special way? We invite you to attend a meeting to learn how to become an Extraordinary Minister of Holy Communion. Our parish is in need of willing and faithful people to share the Body and Blood of Christ with others. It is a true honor and blessing to serve in this sacred ministry—bringing Christ to the hearts of the faithful (at church and also to the homebound). Come and see how you can be a part of this act of service and devotion. Monday, October 27, at 6:00 in the Conference Room.
