FROM FATHER MIKE DEL PADRE MIGUEL

As we get later into the year on the church calendar and farther into the gospel of Luke, we start running into teachings by Jesus related to money. First we are invited to consider our own relationship with money and how much a priority we place on material wealth.

Summarized by the saying, “No servant can have two masters,” Jesus is inviting us to honestly assess the priorities in our life. Are we more focused on how we are earning and spending our money, or are we more obsessed by how we are constantly being blessed by God and how to share those graces we have received with others?

The next passage in Luke then goes into a teaching about how we share our wealth with others, especially those with material needs. The rich man who failed to help Lazarus, the beggar just outside his door, is depicted as one who was so focused on his temporary material comfort that it left him spiritually impoverished. It can feel like those around us who are poor and suffering are an imposition on us, especially if we have been spared of that in our lives. The truth is that having the opportunity to help others in ways that recognize their human dignity and their rightful place in our world is one of the most enriching experiences for any person but especially for us Christians.

Ask the Holy Spirit to show you one way you could change your relationship with money that would deepen your faith and help you live out your commitment to follow Christ and sharing God’s care with others. Better than pursuing wealth, let us do as Paul urges Timothy and pursue “righteousness, devotion, faith, love, patience, and gentleness.”

Mientras avanzamos en el calendario de la iglesia y más adelante en el evangelio de Lucas, comenzamos encontrar las enseñanzas de Jesús sobre el dinero. Primero se nos invita a considerar nuestra propia relación con el dinero y la prioridad que le damos a la riqueza material. Resumido en la frase ‘No hay criado que pueda servir a dos amos’, Jesús nos invita a evaluar honestamente las prioridades en nuestra vida. ¿Nos enfocamos más en cómo ganamos y gastamos nuestro dinero, o estamos más obsesionados con cómo estamos constantemente siendo bendecidos por Dios y cómo compartir esas gracias que hemos recibido con los demás?

La siguiente pasaje en Lucas luego habla sobre cómo compartimos nuestra riqueza con los demás, especialmente con aquellos que tienen necesidades materiales. El hombre rico que no ayudó a Lázaro, el mendigo que estaba a la entrada de su casa, es representado como alguien que estaba tan centrado en su comodidad material temporal que lo dejó espiritualmente empobrecido. Puede parecer que los pobres y los sufridores que nos rodean son una imposición para nosotros, especialmente si nos hemos librado de eso en nuestras vidas. La verdad es que tener la oportunidad de ayudar a los demás de manera que reconozca su dignidad humana y su legítimo lugar en nuestro mundo es una de las experiencias más enriquecedoras para cualquier persona, pero especialmente para nosotros, los cristianos.

Pide al Espíritu Santo que te muestre una forma en que puedas cambiar tu relación con el dinero que profundice tu fe y te ayude a vivir tu compromiso de seguir a Cristo y compartir el amor de Dios con los demás. En lugar de perseguir la riqueza, hagamos como Pablo exhortó a Timoteo y perseguir “una vida de rectitud, piedad, fe, amor, paciencia y mansedumbre.”
