A Continuation of the Pastoral Letter

Warning: this approach to our mission and mission field will be filled with landmines waiting to explode if we step on them and the territory they are protecting. As Catholic communities we are better at starting or maintaining programs, organizations and services than we are at stopping them. The programs, organizations and services that may need to end all served a great purpose at one time but may not serve our purpose in this new era as we move to this dawning and awakening mission moment.

Another challenge with moving to mission will be the focus of our mission attention and energy. The mission field for which we live and move and have our being is not me, or my parish (or school, apostolate, institutions) but it is all the people in the community in which I live. That is where our mission begins and ends. Too often, we perceive that the mission field is our parish, and as a consequence, the parish becomes the be-all and end-all of our mission attention and energy. Yes, we must be attentive to the needs of the parish community and its overall health; after all, as disciples on mission, we cannot give to others that which we do not have ourselves. But like Jesus, our mission is not unto ourselves – we do not exist to be served, but to serve. The mission of our parish is to go out into the communities where we live and invite all people wherever they may be in the journey of life, to discover, follow and worship Jesus

This refocusing of our mission intent and field will yield much fruit. Not only will the community at large be served well, but the parish itself will reap the benefits and fruits of the Holy Spirit, and together we will change from a self-understanding of scarcity to one of abundance. In this divine moment of dawning and moving to mission, we must stop organizing ourselves around decline and begin to believe that in the Holy Spirit of Jesus Christ, there will be twelve bushel baskets left over of everything needed to carry out the mission given to us by God the Father, through Jesus Christ, in the Holy Spirit.

God would never give us a mission and then withhold what we need to accomplish His mission through us. The words scarcity and decline are not a part of God's vocabulary, but they are words that flow from our lips as a reason to give up and to give in to a sense of "it is what it is." Jesus preaches again and again in the gospel: I came that they might have life and have it abundantly! (John 10:10).
