RELIGIOUS EDUCATION FOR CHILDREN ATTENDING PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Raising children to know, live, and love their Catholic faith is a challenging task. Our parish communities assist parents in fulfilling this responsibility through both our parish schools and Sunday morning Religious Education Programs. We invite children who attend our neighborhood public schools to participate in our parish Religious Education Program for grades one through eight which is offered jointly with Our Lady of Lourdes Parish. Classes currently meet on Sunday mornings from 10:05 to 11:20 a.m., but this time may change for the 2023–2024 school year. Please be aware that if you wish your baptized child to receive First Communion in second grade, you must register him/her for the first grade religious education class. Also, if your child wants to play on an athletic team sponsored by St. Antoninus Parish or any other Catholic parish in Cincinnati, he/she must be enrolled in either the parish school or the parish Religious Education Program. Registration forms for the 2023–2024 school year will be available in June on www.lourdes.org under Faith/Religious Education. For questions, please call Ms. Kristina Krimm, Director of Religious Education, at 347-2646 or e-mail kkrimm@lourdes.org.

BREAKING OPEN THE WORD with Dr. Kathy O'Connor PH.D.

Palm Sunday

Reading I: Isaiah 50:4-7: Some Biblical scholars believe that of all the books of the Old Testament, the book of Isaiah is one of the most important from the doctrinal point of view especially pertaining to the great themes of God, man, and salvation. It is, in a sense, a compendium of Old Testament belief, and it opens a wide window onto the fullness of Revelation in the New Testament. Our reading for Mass this Palm Sunday comes from the part of the book of Isaiah known as the third song of the Servant of the Lord. This song shows how determined the servant is: if he suffers in silence it is not out of cowardice but because God helps him and makes him stronger than his persecutors. The evangelists believed that the words of this song find fulfilment in Jesus, especially about the suffering and silent fortitude of the servant. St. Jerome saw the servant's docility as a reference to Christ. In his commentary on the book of Isaiah St. Jerome tells us that although the servant was wounded on his chest and face, he did not try to turn away and escape the violence of the persecutors. This passage is used in the liturgy of Palm Sunday along with Psalm 22 and a passage from St. Paul's Letter to the Philippians before the reading of our Lord's passion.

Responsorial Psalm: Psalm 22: 8-9 17-18, 19-20, 23-24 (2a): The psalm for today is a psalm of David and is both an entreaty and a lament by an individual in distress. This psalm is particularly important in understanding the Passion of our Lord. The opening words of this psalm (not included in our passage today) are "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?" These are the very words Jesus spoke from the Cross. With these words, Jesus showed that He was making His own the feelings of trust in God included in this prayer. This fact gives the psalm a very special value because we are able to see that it prefigured Christ's feelings and it also offers us some insight to what His death meant to Jesus at the time and what it means for us. Jesus suffered mightily on the Cross and what makes His suffering worse is the fact that people who see Him in His present state claim that God does not love Him (v. 8). During His passion Jesus suffered the insults and jeering from the crowd. The people shook their heads when they saw Him on the cross and said it was for God to deliver Him by letting Him come down from the Cross. Even so, the psalmist claims that God has looked after him from his birth. The psalmist feels surrounded and wounded in his hands and feet so he can neither defend himself nor flee. His wounds are such that all his bones are visible and his enemies take him for dead. The persecutors divide his clothes among themselves. We recall from the Lord's Passion that his feet and hands were pierced when He was crucified and His garments were divided up and lots cast for His tunic. In verses 23-24, the psalmist has a sudden change of tone. He is confident that God will respond to him and vows to praise Him. With his praise of thanksgiving the psalmist associates a widening circle of people. What the psalm says in verse 24 about the suffering man who cries out to the Lord finds fulfilment in our Lord who cried out on the Cross before offering His spirit up.

Reading II: Philippians 2:6-11: The opening verses of this passage are frequently somewhat confusing. What is St. Paul saying when he says that Jesus did not regard equality with God something to be grasped? The Greek word translated as equality does not refer directly to equality of nature but rather the equality of rights and status. St. Paul makes clear that Jesus was God and He could not stop being God. Therefore, He had the right to be treated as God and to appear in all His glory (such as He appeared during the Transfiguration). However, Jesus did not insist on this dignity of His as if it were a treasure which He possessed and which was legally His. It was not something He clung to nor boasted about. So, He took "the form of a servant (recall the first reading from Isaiah) and became like men in all things but sin. By becoming man in the way He did, He was able, as Isaiah had prophesied, to bear our sorrows and to be stricken. Christ did not shed His divine nature; He simply shed its glory and aura. Verses 6-8, in a very few words, "becoming obedient" provide a contrast between Jesus and Adam. Adam, a mere man, was tempted by the serpent to "be like God". Jesus, on the other hand, enjoyed divine glory from all eternity and emptied Himself. Jesus chooses the way of humility which is the opposite of Adam. Christ's obedience thereby makes up for the disobedience of the first man. Continued on the next page...

Christ's obedience restores man to the natural and supernatural gifts with which God endowed human nature at the creation and even surpasses it. St. Paul tells us that Jesus became man for "us men and our salvation". Everything Jesus did in the course of His life on earth had a salvific value; his death on the cross represents the pinnacle of His redemptive work. As St. Gregory of Nyssa wrote, "He did not experience death due to the fact of being born; rather, He took birth upon Himself in order to die."

Gospel: Matthew 26:14-27:66: (The Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ according to Matthew): Our Gospel passage for this Palm Sunday begins with Judas' betrayal of Jesus. It is both disappointing and sobering to realize that Judas went as far as to sell the man whom he had believed to be the Messiah and who had called him to be one of the apostles. Thirty pieces of silver, the amount the chief priests paid Judas, was the price of a slave and it is this price that Judas put on his Master. The passage then moves to the Last Supper during which Jesus tells the apostles, with Judas present, that one of them will betray Him. Jesus tells the apostles that His betrayer will be the "one who has dipped his hand in the dish with me". Jesus also tells them that He will soon give Himself up freely to suffering and death and in so doing He would fulfil the will of God as proclaimed centuries before. Although Jesus dies voluntarily, this does not reduce the seriousness of Judas' treachery. Verses 26-29 tell us about the institution of the Holy Eucharist and the institution of the Christian priesthood. When Jesus says "This is my body....this is my blood...." He is instituting the Holy Eucharist which He wants continued in memory of Him until He returns. What up to this point was nothing but unleavened bread and wine, now----through the words and by the will of Jesus--- becomes the true body and true blood of the Savior under the appearance of bread and wine. Note that the Lord did not say "this is a symbol of my body and blood". Jesus said it is His body and blood. Jesus instituted this sacrament to be spiritual nourishment of the soul and to strengthen the soul in its struggle to attain salvation. At the conclusion of the Last Supper Jesus and the apostles went out into the garden where the Lord tells the apostles that their faith in Him will be shaken. Peter tries to reassure Jesus that he will not abandon Him but Jesus tells Peter that before the sun rises again he will deny Him three times. When the group arrives in Gethsemane Jesus goes off to pray taking Peter and two other apostles with Him. Here Jesus enters into the agony in the garden. The three apostles fall asleep while Jesus prays. Jesus was deeply distressed at this time and in His prayer to His Father "if it is possible, let this cup pass me by, yet not my will but your will be done". In His agony in the garden Jesus experienced a kind of anticipation of the pain and abandonment He will feel hanging on the cross. Yet, Jesus again demonstrates that He is giving Himself up of His own free will. It is not force which puts Him to death but His own love and His desire to fulfil His Father's will. At this point, Judas arrives with a large crowd of people. Judas betrays Jesus with a sign of friendship and trust: he had arranged a signal of a kiss to indicate the man to be arrested. Jesus is arrested and taken before the chief priests. While Jesus was being questioned Peter was sitting outside and three different times was identified as being one of Jesus' followers. Peter denied his relationship with Jesus three times just as Jesus said he would. When Peter realized what he had done, he left and deeply sorrowful, wept bitterly. Jesus is condemned to death, scourged, given His cross to carry, and led to the place where He will be crucified. During the crucifixion, we see the fulfilment of the words we read in the passage from Isaiah.

Reflection: There is so much to reflect on in the Palm Sunday readings. Today we are entering Holy Week, the most holy time in the liturgical year. Often, for some it is an uncomfortable week because it leads to Good Friday and we are deeply focused on the death of Jesus. It is such a relief when Easter Sunday dawns and we can celebrate Jesus' resurrection. His rising is more pleasant to contemplate. However, there is no Easter Sunday without Good Friday. There is no resurrection without first dying. Perhaps, this Holy Week, we can pause and contemplate Good Friday. Something had gone terribly wrong in the world with us due to sin. We could not fix it. Only God could fix it and so He sent His only Son. He who was without sin became sin for us and our salvation. Continued on the next page...

The late priest and theologian Fr. Richard John Neuhaus believes that we have a strong tendency to minimize our own faults and regard our sins as “small”. That is just human nature. Neuhaus wrote that Good Friday brings us into a very painful moment regarding our own sins. If the Son of God had to suffer such a horrible death, then our sins cannot have been “small”. He reminds us to keep in mind that Jesus did not just die for all of the sins that had been committed since Adam and Eve. He died for every sin that will ever be committed. That includes mine and yours all these years later. Our reluctance to see our sins as they really are, in other words, as God sees them, leads us to another mistaken perception: that is, that we can somehow make things right. On Good Friday God make it clear that we ourselves are incapable of setting things right. He made it clear by offering His life up for the salvation of all. Jesus spoke from the cross “Father forgive them for they know not what they do”. It has been thought that Jesus was speaking about His executioners. He was, but Fr. Neuhaus points out that He was also speaking about us. We get caught up in our habits and busy lives, and speaking for myself, gloss over shortcomings and missed opportunities. So, Jesus was also speaking to us when He prayed to the Father saying “they know not what they do”. Our glorious Lord is merciful as we know from Good Friday. Perhaps during this Holy Week we can more deeply reflect on Christ’s sacrifice for us personally and thank Him for dying for us personally. Maybe we can also put one of our shortcomings up on the Cross with Jesus and ask His help in giving it up or letting it go as we strive to follow Him more closely.

In 1974, Archbishop Fulton Sheen said, "We are at the end of Christendom. Not of Christianity, not of the Church, but of Christendom. What is Christendom? Christendom is economic, political, social life as inspired by Christian principles. But this is not a gloomy picture, it is a picture of Church in the midst of increasing opposition in the world. It is now that we must live our lives in the full consciousness in this hour of testing and rally closer to the heart of Christ!"
