BREAKING OPEN THE WORD with Dr. Kathy O'Connor PH.D. FOURTH SUNDAY OF EASTER

This weekend is the last time this column will be published in the parish family bulletin. If you wish to receive the column by email please send an email to bollin@saintantoninus.org. If you wish to receive it by mail please call the rectory office at 513-922-5400 x 2.

Reading I: Acts of the Apostles 2:14a, 36-41: During His life on earth Jesus had often presented Himself as the Messiah and Son of God. His resurrection and ascension into heaven reveal Him as such to the people at large. In Peter's address we can see an outline of the content of the apostolic proclamation, the content of Christian preaching, the object of faith. This proclamation bears witness to Jesus' death, resurrection and subsequent exaltation. It also recalls the main points of Jesus' mission, announced by John the Baptist, confirmed by miracles, and brought to fulfilment by the appearances of the risen Lord and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. It declares that the messianic time predicted by the prophets has arrived, and calls all men to conversion in preparation for the Parousia, or second coming of Christ in glory. St. Peter's words, boldly proclaimed, were the instrument used by God's grace to move the hearts of his listeners. His audience is so impressed that they ask in all simplicity what they should do. St. Peter exhorts them to repent and be converted. He calls for them to be baptized in the name of Jesus and to receive the Holy Spirit. The promise of the Holy Spirit applies to both Jews and Gentiles. The "crooked generation" to which St. Peter refers is not only that part of the Jewish people who rejected Christ and His teaching, but everyone who is estranged from God. At the end of this passage, the author of Acts of the Apostles, St. Luke, tells us that "about three thousand souls" became Christians as a result of St. Peter's address.

Responsorial Psalm: Psalm 23: 1-3a, 4, 5, 6(1): Our responsorial psalm today is the well- known and loved 23rd psalm. It is a psalm of David which proclaims the nearness of God. The psalm is built around two metaphors: the Lord as shepherd (verses 1-4) and the Lord as host (verses 5-6). In the ancient East and in the Old Testament, the shepherd was used as a metaphor for the king and for God as protector and judge of His people. What makes this psalm special is the very personal note, "The Lord is my shepherd" and that the fact that by spelling out the actions of a shepherd it describes God's relationship with someone who seeks righteousness, holiness, and in this case, the author of the psalm, King David, the anointed king. The sense of security the Lord gives even in the midst of affliction allows the speaker to address Him directly and the protection that He gives. After acknowledging the Lord's protection, the psalm now thanks Him for His benefits: He has made the psalmist His guest, and anointed him and filled him with good things. The speaker goes on to tell God how confident he feels that he will go on enjoying the benefits of the Covenant (goodness and mercy) and will continue to visit the temple for a long time to come. In the light of Jesus' description of Himself as the Good Shepherd, all who believe in Him and in His work of redemption can adopt the psalm's words and feelings.

Reading II: 1Peter 2:20b-25: Our second reading for Mass this weekend addresses Christians undergoing unnamed sufferings. Sufferings are harsh but God is pleased when His people endure unfairness for His sake. In doing so, they are imitating the example of Jesus in His suffering. Verses 21-25 is a beautiful hymn to Christ on the cross. Christ's sufferings, which fulfil the prophecies about the suffering Servant in the Book of Isaiah, have not been in vain for they have a redemptive value. The example of the suffering Christ is always a necessary reference point for Christians: however great the trials we experience, the example of Jesus' suffering gives strength in adversity. In verse 25 we read about the scattered flock. St. Peter himself was the shepherd to whom Jesus had given charge of His flock. Continued on next page...

Our Lord founded the Church as a sheepfold whose sheep, although watched over by human shepherds are nevertheless at all times led and brought to pasture by Christ Himself, the Good Shepherd who gave His life for His sheep.

Gospel: John 10:1-10: This speech takes place right after Jesus cured the man born blind, when the man defends Jesus as the Messiah in front of the threatening Pharisees. In this speech, Jesus employs two different shepherding images to illustrate His care for all those who follow Him. Israel had long been a shepherding people and none of those details would have been lost on Jesus' listeners. Israel's greatest king was a shepherd (David) and it is one of the favorite images of God in the psalms and prophets. In addition to the title of Good Shepherd Jesus applies to Himself, He also uses the image of the door (or sheep gate) into the sheepfold of the Church. By assuming this identity, Jesus asserts both our need for His guidance and care, as well as His great willingness to provide it. Let's look at the sheep and the sheepfold a little more in depth. A flock of sheep needs both protection and nourishment. The corral or sheepfold provides the protection and the fields provide the food and water. Without the corral they are vulnerable to attack (sheep are famously bad at self-defense) and without the pasture, they starve. When Jesus calls himself the "gate" for the sheep, He is claiming to provide us with everything we need: both the sheepfold and the pasture. Sheep also have a tendency to wander away from the flock which places them in danger. Shepherds often sleep at night in the opening of the sheepfold or corral. In so doing, the shepherds both scare away the wolves and keep the sheep together. The sheep have no desire to step over the shepherd to escape since they recognize him as a sign of security. When day finally dawns, the shepherd will rise and lead his sheep out to pasture. Thus, the gate, the door to the sheep pen, symbolizes the complete attention and care given by a good shepherd. Jesus chooses this image to teach us what He wants to be for each of us: everything.

Reflection: Jesus wants us to know who He is: the Good Shepherd who protects and cares for the people of God just as a shepherd does his sheep. He does not claim to be one among many, but the only one. Some religious leaders and philosophers throughout history have claimed to be saviors, claimed to have all of the answers but were really powered by pride or lust. Other leaders promise to provide a better way; life in which we are our own judges and we will determine what is right and wrong for ourselves. But these other would be "shepherds" simply cannot provide the human family with the kind of hope we long for and need. Their power and wisdom is limited, and in the end, they are just like the wolves waiting to pounce just outside the sheepfold. Jesus, on the other hand not only wants to give us abundant life, but He can. Omniscient, omnipotent, and eternal, He combines utter goodness with unlimited wisdom and power. With His flock, the problem is not the shepherd's powerlessness or ignorance, but the sheep's lack of docility: we stray easily from the flock and trap ourselves in thistles and swamps. The parable of the Good Shepherd is one of faith. The sheep hear the shepherd's voice and they follow him. As Christians, we have the perfect Shepherd; now all we need is to be sensible sheep and listen to the voice of the One we know. Do you hear the voice of the Good Shepherd? The Good Shepherd calls each of us by name. Perhaps this week we might reflect on the following: 1) what is the significance for me of Jesus calling each of His sheep by name, 2) what is the significance for me of Jesus' proclamation, "I am the gate"; 3) what is my idea of an abundant life, now and here in eternity? Lord, it is hard for me to admit that I need you as much as I do. Why is that Lord? Why do I think I can be so self-sufficient, when I know very well that I am constantly stumbling along and messing things up? Call my name Lord, and give me the grace to trust wholly in your goodness and obey fully your will...
