FIND FREEDOM IN OBEDIENCE

YOUNG CHURCH MOVEMENT & FAITH FORMATION

HOT TAKE

What is your biggest regret? Is it not moving when you had the chance, or maybe not having the courage to ask that one person on a date whom you always wanted to? Maybe you regret not trying a sport in high school or not learning to play an instrument. Most people have something they regret, but I have never met anyone whose regret was giving someone a compliment, telling a family member, "I love you," or thanking someone who made a major impact on their life. So why do we often hesitate to do these things? So often we think something positive about others and do not share it with them. Unfortunately, I know many people who have lost loved ones and wish they could tell them something they never got around to saying. Just a few months ago, I saw a friend of mine here at St. Mary on my way to Mass. I was going to tell him something, but I had my hands full with my two kids, so I just waved and smiled at him on my way in. Two weeks later, I found out he had passed away. Luckily, I had told this person on many occasions how thankful I was for him and how lucky we were to have him as a member of our parish. Life can be really great, but sometimes life is really hard. There have been many moments when I was feeling down and the kind words of someone lifted me out of a dark spot. So what is keeping you from speaking up and telling people how you really feel? Do you think it might be strange, or that people will judge you, or think you are too nice? I encourage you to speak up, because you will not regret it, and you just might uplift someone in your life who really needs it. Stop overthinking it. Be blessed. -David
