From the desk of Father Rudolph

Return to Sender...

Have you ever had a letter returned to you as undeliverable? Or had an email bounce back? It can be frustrating to figure out how it happened and what to do about it.

God sent the Good News of salvation, love, and peace into the world through Jesus Christ. But a lot of people seem to have not gotten the message. Or, if they did get it, they seem to have lost it.

Many of you who are Christian parents know this all too well. You tried to pass on the faith as you knew it to your children, only to see them reject it as teenagers or young adults. What can you do?

Brandon Vogt has some suggestions for you in a book he wrote called Return. It's subtitled How to Draw Your Child Back to the Church, has a forward by Bishop Robert Barron, and was published by Word on Fire Catholic Ministries in 2021. I read it this summer and am very impressed.

The first part of the book is devoted to understanding the problem. The author looks at why young people are leaving the Church, where they are going, and five big myths about fallen-away Catholics. Next, he lays out a game plan—mistakes to avoid, thresholds your child needs to cross, and how to help him or her find the ultimate Treasure, which is to encounter the Lord Jesus Christ and to personally know and love him. He also explains praying, fasting, and sacrificing; equipping yourself; planting the seeds; starting the conversation; moving the dialogue forward; inviting and connecting; and closing the loop. In the third part of the book, Vogt discusses the biggest objections people have to the Church, including personal objections, moral objections, and theological objections. Finally, he gives helpful pointers about how to take the first step with your son or daughter, and how to proceed from there one step at a time.

It may sound like a lot, but it's like constructing a building—you just do it one brick at a time and keep at it until it's done.

One of the insights that really struck me is the importance of being a good listener to your son or daughter. Don't try to cram information into your child's brain, no matter how important or true it is. First establish rapport, if it has broken down or frayed, by asking helpful open-ended questions and sincerely listening to the answers—for example, about what he or she doesn't like about going to Mass or youth group, what has drawn your child to another church, or if there are some things about the Catholic Church she or he doesn't like or agree with. The purpose is to listen, trying to understand your child, not come up with rebuttal points right away. That can wait for another day and conversation. Also, doing activities with your child that he or she enjoys, even if you don't, can increase trust and openness in the relationship. Vogt gave the example of going to a heavy metal concert.

Another thing I remember from the book is the importance of trying to see the good in whatever point of view your child expresses and affirm it. For example, if your daughter or son mentions sex scandals as a reason to stay away from the Church, you can say something like: "Yah, I think those are really terrible too. Heartbreaking." If he or she says Mass is boring, you can say something like: "I don't blame you for not wanting to be bored. Can you think of something that might make the Mass interesting for you?" Or if she says she likes the music in another, non-Catholic church better, you might try something like: "Music is an important part of worship. It can lift our hearts and minds up to God." You might even consider suggesting another local Catholic parish that has music more to your child's liking. Relationship building is key to helping your detoured teen or young adult return to the Church of the Sender of all the good things he or she is deep down looking for. This book can help.

Yours in Christ,
Father Rudolph

Saint of the Day - Saint Ida of Herzfeld

Ida was born about the year 766 in what is now Germany. She was the only one of five brothers and sisters to not become a religious. She was happily married to a man named Eckbert, who was a member of the nobility. They had five children together, of these, three entered religious life. While Ida was still young, her husband came down with a long and painful illness, through which she lovingly took care of him. After he died from it, she embarked on a life of prayer and strict self-denial. When one of her sons, Warin, went to be a monk at the monastery of Corvey, she moved from her home in Hofstadt castle to nearby Herzfeld. There she built a small chapel for her own use in a church that she and her husband had built and used most of the income from the estates she owned to help the needy. She remained at Herzfeld, doing good works, for the rest of her life. As a reminder of her eventual death and of her duty to her neighbor, she is said to have had a stone coffin which she made sure was filled up daily with food for the poor. Toward the end of her life she suffered from a persistent and painful illness, which she bore with great patience. She was buried near her husband at Herzfeld in the cemetery of a convent she had founded there. Saint Ida of Herzfeld, pray for us! Being altar servers at Mass is a privilege and an honor. It is a special way to serve God and his people. The service that you provide plays an important role in the life of St. Nicholas Catholic Church. Being an altar server, like anything worth doing, is worth doing well. For that reason we have two training sessions coming up.

We invite all boys from Fourth Grade through High School who have made their First Holy Communion to participate in this important ministry.
