

A Word from Fr. Mike

Okay, not to go all Ebenezer Scrooge on everyone here, but the crusty, crotchety Fr. Mike is about to make an appearance. I need to air one of my biggest pet peeves of our current secular culture—something hovering somewhere between our obsession with instant gratification and the commercialization (or outright secularization) of every major holiday.

What am I talking about? Well...it's Halloween candy displays in August. Mariah Carey Christmas already thawing out before Thanksgiving. Easter being reduced to bunnies, egg hunts, and pastel sugar bombs. Oktoberfest beers sold out before October even arrives. (This one hits me personally.)

Now, don't get me wrong—I'm the post-conversion Scrooge. I love Christmas. I love everything about it. But we can't forget a simple truth: Our constant obsession with what's around the corner can drown out the grace of the present moment.

The lights, the early Christmas parties, the gift exchanges, WHAM! and Nat King Cole—all of it can so easily drown out the wonderful treasure of Advent. And then, the day after Christmas, the trees are on the curb and everyone is suddenly on to New Year's resolutions they'll abandon by January 12th.

But Advent... Advent is intentionally different. Advent is one of those seasons that our culture glosses over, and I think that's exactly why it might be my favorite liturgical season of the entire year. Advent teaches us to wait when everything around us says, "Rush." It teaches us patience and anticipation in a world that offers same-day shipping and wants answers from ChatGPT in three seconds or less. Advent teaches us silence, reflection, preparatory penance—to get our house in order because a King is coming. It invites us into the stillness and the dark, to imagine a world in which Christ had not yet come... so that when Christmas finally arrives, the joy of our Savior's coming can actually mean something. This season is a quiet gift—four short weeks that form us in the virtues our hearts secretly crave: silence, patience, hope, gratitude, expectation.

So here's my invitation. Don't let the world skip Advent on your behalf. Don't rush past the graces God is offering right now. Enter the season. Let it slow you down. Let it open your heart. Let it make Christmas richer, deeper, and more joyful than ever.

Continued Blessings on this beautiful season.

Sincerely,
Fr. Scrooge
