National Diabetes Awareness Month

Nearly 29.1 million Americans have diabetes, a serious disease in which blood glucose (blood sugar) levels are above normal. Most people with diabetes have type 2, which used to be called adult-onset diabetes. At one time, type 2 diabetes was more common in people over age 45. But now more young people, even children, have the disease because many are overweight or obese. But diabetes is preventable. One in four Americans with diabetes has it and doesn't know it.

There are many factors that increase your risk for diabetes. To find out about your risk, note each item on this list that applies to you.

- I am 45 years of age or older.
- I am overweight or obese.
- I have a parent, brother, or sister with diabetes.
- My family background is African American, Hispanic/Latino, American Indian, Asian American or Pacific Islander.
- I have had diabetes while I was pregnant or I gave birth to a baby weighing 9 pounds or more.
- I have been told that my blood sugar levels are higher than normal.
- My blood pressure is 140/90 or higher.
- My HDL cholesterol ("good" cholesterol) is less than 35 or my triglyceride level is higher than 250.
- I am fairly physically inactive. • I have been told that I have polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS)
- The skin around my neck or in my armpits appears dirty no matter how much I scrub it. The skin appears dark, thick and velvety.
- I have been told that I have blood vessel problems affecting my heart, brain, or legs.

If you have any of the items above, be sure to talk with your health care team about your risk for diabetes and whether you should be tested.

Reference:

National Institute of Diabetes and

Digestive and Kidney Disease

Symptoms

The symptoms of type 2 diabetes due to high blood sugar may include: increased thirst; increased hunger (esp after eating); dry mouth; unexplained weight loss; frequent urination; fatigue; blurred vision and headaches

Pre-diabetes

What is it? Pre-diabetes occurs when blood sugar levels are higher than normal but not high enough for a type 2 diabetes diagnosis. Risk for developing type 2 diabetes may be reduced or eliminated by weight loss, healthier eating and increased physical activity. Risk factors are very similar to the above factors for diabetes. Over 80 million people have pre-diabetes but only 10 million people know they do.

JUMPING FOR JOY THIS ADVENT

By Patricia Lorenz

In this devotion, we are reminded that we're meant to concentrate on what's important during Advent, not the hustle and bustle of Christmas.

“And now you have become living building-stones for God's use in building His house. ...I Peter 2:5 “

At the pool on a warm Florida November day, my friend Paula and I were talking about Advent. Paula recalled that as a kid in Vermont, she spent Advent preparing for the annual Christmas pageant.

The grade school children memorized lines, polished their acting skills and worked on costumes so they could delight the community.

Paula remembers one year when the students were supposed to do various things to entertain the baby Jesus. Some delivered special gifts, one sang a song, a few danced. One little girl was asked to jump rope.

Unfortunately, as the little girl jumped up and down, her bloomers fell down around her ankles. Paula says the little girl just kicked them away and kept on “jumping for joy”.

Paula's story reminded me of the problems that seem to crop up during the four weeks before Christmas. The season is supposed to be about preparing our hearts to welcome Jesus into our lives, but often it becomes a, time of too much to do, too little time and too much stress.

Sometimes extra gifts must be purchased and wrapped when unexpected guests announce their impending arrival. Or maybe a new holiday cookie recipe falls flat. Or there's a mess of broken ornaments when a little one knocks over the Christmas tree.

The very nature of Advent means it's a time to settle down, take a deep breath and concentrate on what's important ...Jesus. And when things don't go perfectly as planned, I need to plant that smile on my face, sweep up the mess and keep on jumping for joy.

Lord, as the Advent season sweeps over me, keep me calm and enjoying the anticipation of an event so amazing it changed the world
