FAMILY CONNECTION

<https://www.loyolapress.com/>

Today's Gospel invites us to reflect upon our worship of God. For Jesus and his Jewish contemporaries, the Temple was an important, holy place where they gathered to worship God. The Christian understanding of worship was transformed in light of Jesus' Resurrection. In the Christian understanding, God is worshiped in a person, the person of Jesus Christ. As we read in today's Gospel, Jesus is himself the Temple that will be destroyed, but in three days God will raise him up again.

As you gather as a family, talk about places and times when you have experienced God's presence. After his Resurrection, Jesus' disciples understood that Jesus was present with them as they gathered to pray and especially when they gathered to share a meal. Read together today's Gospel, John 2:13-25. Jesus teaches us in today's Gospel that he is God's presence with us. Thank God for Jesus' presence with us, especially in the Sacrament of the Eucharist. Pray together the Lord's Prayer.

Care for our Common Home

Care for our earth and care for one another are intimately bound together as we witnessed in Texas a few weeks ago. If we feel intimately united with all that exists, than sobriety and care will well up spontaneously.

“As Catholics we have a special voice to speak about justice but it can only happen when Creation Care is not seen as optional but as an actual moral issue for Catholics”. Dr. Cathrine Wright, Asst. Professor of Religion and Philosophy.

Bishop Tyson has encouraged us to pray for vocations to the priesthood and religious life. Juan Nieves is studying at Mt. Angel Abbey. Please keep him and those who are considering vocations in your prayers.

Refocus in the desert

Lent may be a time of penance and sacrifice but it doesn't have to be a time of sadness. In fact, the season brings an opportunity to become the people God created us to be. This time in our spiritual desert can be a chance to simplify, focus, and concentrate.

Simplify. Look for areas in your life where there are excesses. When we have too much of something, it can take extra time to sort, store, and maintain the Supply beyond what we need. For example, is your clothes closet packed too tightly? Is your pantry overstocked? Can you clean out and give some gently used items to the poor? You'll spend less mental and physical energy if you keep only what you need.

Focus. During Lent, we are called to spend more intentional time with God. To help, consider fasting from distractions. Limiting social media exposure, controlling time spent working, or turning off the cell phone for periods of time can help you find space to add more prayer and Scripture reading to your day.

Concentrate. Avoid influences that pull you away from God. "...But worldly anxiety, the lure of riches, and the craving for other things intrude and choke the Word, and it bears no fruit" (Mark 4:19). Resolve to live a life that pleases God.

OPERATION RICE BOWL

SUSTAINABILITY IN EL SALVADOR

Drought has become a big problem across El Salvador, making it difficult for farmers to produce enough crops to support their families. But new farming techniques—and a new generation of young farmers—are making a difference. What would you do if your livelihood was threatened? How can you support young people in your community and around the world? Visit csrricebowl.org to learn more.

As part of our communities observance of almsgiving for Lent, we ask all families to participate in Catholic Relief Services' Operation Rice Bowl, a program of prayer, fasting, learning and giving. Please be sure to take a Rice Bowl from the entrances and return to the office at the end of Lent.

Does God seem far away? Would you like to get closer??

The Struggle is Real: Helping Teens with Mental Health by ADAM CROSS

About 20% of teens struggle with mental health. You've probably had a teenager who has wrestled with this, and a significant part of your youth group likely experiences some kind of mental health issue. So how can you help? The good news is that as a Youth Minister and someone walking with teens in the faith, Christ gives us real tools to help teens actively struggling with mental health.

The Model

So, where do we begin? One of the greatest things we can do for teens and those struggling with mental health is model that health to others. We can ask first: how am I doing? Am I pausing for prayer/ quiet time/ lunch/exercise/fun? When we take the time to check in with ourselves, we model this pursuit of mental health for those around us.

It's key for all of us to do our work and seek out the help and healing we need. As Youth Ministers and someone who is helping others, we also need to care for our mental well being and have the tools and support necessary for our lives. This might mean having our own therapist, counselor, and good support on hand. Pausing and finding our own well being important allows us to pick up the tools God has given us and share those with others in need.

One Savior

The biggest relief as we walk with teens in mental health is that we don't need to have all the answers. We are not the final stop in someone's road to healing and are called to connect them with professional therapists, crisis counselors, doctors, priests, and their own family support. God works through His Church, professionals, and family for the healing of His children. Knowing it's not all on us allows Christ to work and gives us the freedom to help teens pick up real tools and ask for the help they need.

Real Steps

As we care for our mental health and let Christ be Christ, we can point teens towards tools to help their mental health. This journey of healing involves real steps we can take to help teens grow in their mental health.

Personal Check In's

The saying goes: people don't care how much you know until they know how much you care. It's a true gift for a teen to have an adult or friend who intentionally checks in. We can check in with those struggling and let them know we care. We all thrive with more support! This involves active listening, asking those open-ended questions, and simply being available.

It's Real Now

Oftentimes, simply saying a feeling or thought out loud is a moment of relief and freedom. We can underestimate the power of acknowledging thoughts and feelings as real and actually happening. Journaling also makes a huge difference and helps teens to understand what is going on in their heads. We can encourage writing in prayer or a letter to someone in their lives (that they don't send) for clarity and to sort out their thoughts and emotions.

Name It To Tame It

In his book "Love and Responsibility," St. John Paul II explains that our emotions and feelings actually point to our deeper values and what is important to us. We can help teens understand what is essential and what is going on in their lives by asking them to name their feelings. One simple way is to ask a teen where are you in the buckets (imagine big red buckets) of sad, mad, glad, and afraid? Simplifying and naming what they are experiencing gives insight into what they are dealing with and provides more options!

You Are Not 'Crazy'

The reality of mental health is that most people, at some point, experience anxiety and depressive or negative thoughts. Today there is still a lot of stigma around mental health and what it means to be crazy. Letting teens know that they are not crazy or the only ones carrying these struggles lightens the load and brings hope. While normalizing that anxious and negative thoughts do occur, we can encourage and normalize the need to expand our tool kits and coping skills to handle these things when they do come.

Ask The Healer

Lastly, we can invite the God of life, Healer of healers, into our journey with those around us in prayer and petition. God longs to heal as He did through Christ building His Kingdom on earth. That same Holy Spirit is still here and available to us. He is working through the tools, professionals, and support in these teens' lives. As sons and daughters of the Most High, we can be instruments of His healing grace as we intentionally pray for their healing and journey in taking real steps towards better mental health.

Christ longs to heal, and puts real steps, tools, and people before us to help those struggling with mental health. So much healing comes from sharing, naming, praying, and seeking help for those struggling with mental health. As brothers and sisters, we can walk with one another towards this help and the peace that Christ provides.
