“Would that all the people of the Lord were prophets! Would that the Lord might bestow his spirit on them all!” This is the exuberant proclamation of Moses in today’s first reading and we must recognize that God intended to fulfill this wish of Moses in each one of us. Each one of us has been gifted with God’s Spirit and so each one of us is called to be a prophet of God.

All of us receive the Spirit of God in our baptism. The Spirit that we receive in baptism is the same Spirit that was poured out upon Jesus Christ in his baptism. It was the Spirit who led Jesus to proclaim good news to the poor, to bring healing to the sick, to drive foreigners, to offer mercy, forgiveness, and reconciliation to sinners, to place compassion before compliance with the law. It was the Spirit, therefore, who called Jesus to be a prophet of God, someone whose words and actions illuminated how we are to live as true children of God.

Having received the same Spirit that Jesus received, we are now called to fulfill the wish of Moses and to become true prophets of God by our daily witness to the values of Jesus Christ. We are called to bring good news to the poor. We do that when we respond to their need in charity and when we act with justice to change the systems that perpetuate their poverty. We bring healing to the sick when we are present to those who are sick and when we advocate for public policies to insure that all have access to adequate health care. We drive out evil from this world when we reject all forms of racism and prejudice, especially the pernicious prejudice against Muslims that is too prevalent in our country today. We welcome foreigners when we respect the rights of immigrants and oppose those who want to deport those who have established out evil from the world, to welcome lives here and have contributed to our communal well-being. As Spirit led prophets of God we strive to be instruments of peace and reconciliation among all.

If Moses looked at your life would he see that his wish had been fulfilled?

Fr. Mark Hallinan, S.J.

Treasures From Our Traditions - At first glance, the situation of the penitents in the early church is shocking: isolated and labeled, their journey back to fellowship at the Lord's table seems arduous and even cruel. Penances were performed for all to see, and we can tell from the homilies of the day that people earnestly desired to see the sinner benefit from the remedy. Tertullian reminded the penitents that they were living among their brothers and sisters, fellow servants of the same Lord, still in the embrace of the Spirit. He tells them that when they extend their hands in blessing to the faithful, it is Christ they touch. He tells them that when they see tears in the eyes of believers, it is Christ who is interceding for them with the Father. There is a treasure of our tradition woven into this history: these people knew profoundly that the prayer of Christ's body, the church, was the prayer of Christ himself. Prayer was not merely support for a person down on his or her luck; it was effective and necessary. The treasure we can see even through the tangles of history is this: the Spirit of God is poured out on the church, and brings grace, forgives sin, makes us holy, and always calls us to fullness of life. —Rev.
