Pope Francis: Tolerating each other's flaws fights devil's attempts to divide

Humility, kindness and generosity are needed to create peace in the world, starting in one's own family (or parish), Pope Francis said.

"To create peace, unity among us (it takes) humility, gentleness - we who are used to insulting each other, yelling at each other - gentleness, and magnanimity,"

People today are also too used to being around conflict, especially with the news always talking about conflicts, "one after the other."

This tendency to destroy, create war and divide people, the pope said, is sown in people's hearts by the devil, "the destroyer of humanity."

"Bearing with one another is not easy. Always some judgment, condemnation comes out, leading to separation, distance," Francis said.

"The devil is happy" when he is able to alienate family members, the pope said, so the apostle's advice is to bear with each other because everyone is a sinner and has flaws which can bother others and make them impatient.

"Jesus' advice is to find agreement in the beginning, make peace right away" before problems escalate, he said. "This is humility, gentleness, this is magnanimity."

"The world needs peace, we need peace, our families need peace," he said. "Start practicing these simple things at home" and start walking on a path of unity.

The Christmas Giving Tree is once again presented by the Sisters of Life to serve pregnant women and their families.

Collection weekend is December 1-2.
