YEAR OF MARK

February 22nd, 2015 First Sunday of Lent

In Genesis God establishes a covenant with Noah and his family and, by extension, all future humanity. It is a covenant of promise: "never again shall all bodily creatures be destroyed" (v11). This covenant binds God and creation and is symbolized by the bow in the sky. For the ancients, this bow, reminiscent of a hunter's bow, is a sign of God's promise to sustain life even in the face of sin.

In First Peter we are reminded that "Christ suffered for sins...that he might lead you to God" (v18). Jesus' suffering reconciles us with God. The writer goes on to say that Jesus "went to preach to the spirits in prison, who had been disobedient...in the days of Noah" (vv19-20). This ties in with the ancient belief that between the time of his death and resurrection, Jesus "descended into hell," which the Catechism of the Catholic Church interprets as "Christ went down to the realm of the dead. He opened heaven's gates for the just who had gone before him" (637).

Mark's presentation of Jesus' temptation is minimal, as was his description of Jesus' baptism (see vv 9-11). For Mark, these two episodes provide a transition to Jesus' public ministry. He does not narrate individual temptations, as we find in Matthew and Luke, but tells us that Jesus "remained in the desert for forty days, tempted by Satan" (v13). Perhaps Mark does not detail the temptations because his Gospel contains many other encounters between Jesus and the devil, beginning with the exorcism in the Capernaum synagogue several verses later. What Mark's text emphasizes is that though Jesus was threatened "among wild beasts," he was protected: "angels ministered to him" (v13). This serves as a reminder to us that God watches over us as well.

For Reflection: Do I understand Jesus' temptation to be a once-in-a-lifetime event or something that happened more than once? How does this shape my understanding of Jesus and temptation?
