Regarding the Criminal Acquittal of Fr. William A. Nolan

MADISON — The Diocese of Madison received word yesterday that Fr. William Nolan, a retired priest of the diocese was found not guilty by a jury, of all counts against him stemming from charges that he had sexually abused a minor.

While the diocese has received the news of Fr. Nolan's criminal acquittal on all charges with a sense of gratitude, diocesan leadership now has the responsibility to undertake its own investigation, using the best information it has available. That investigation, which previously had been paused so as not to interfere with the criminal process, can now commence. During the period of the Church's investigation, Fr. Nolan remains under the restrictions placed on him previously (commonly known as "Administrative Leave"). It is important to note, however, that he should continue to receive every presumption of innocence.
