Twenty-second Sunday in Ordinary Time

Deuteronomy 4:1-2, 6-8; James 1:17-18, 21b-22, 27; Mark 7:1-8, 14-15, 21-23

On the first day of school the student learns very quickly what are the rules and regulations of that school. They may or may not be the same from year to year; nonetheless, each year they must be learned anew.

What isn't learned that first day is the matter of which rules are more or less important, and which ones the teacher(s) will enforce more or less strictly. This learning takes a while, but each student learns it in time.

What is also learned in this whole process is some rules are important, but not enforced as such; and some rules are minor but may cause big trouble if they are broken. A spirit of fairness and unfairness is learned; a sense of respect for or disdain for the rules is learned. Much depends on those who make and enforce them whether the students' develop a good or poor attitude toward the rules.

Once can easily see how this analogy connects to today's gospel passage. Of course there were rules, regulations and traditions in the Jewish religion. This was to be expected. What wasn't to be expected is that petty regulations and superficial rules would take on so much importance in day to day life. The petty leaders used petty regulations to control the lives of others and to make themselves look good. Jesus condemned them. He had every reason for doing so.

Next week's readings:

Isaiah 35:4-7a; James 2:1-5; Mark 7:31-37

The one who does justice will live in the presence of the Lord.

God, in your goodness, you have made a home for the worker. Make a place in our hearts for compassion to the men and women who labor tirelessly for basic necessities. Ensure a place for the men and women who are struggling to find work. Grant us your wisdom to greet and care for those who are unable to work due to illness or circumstances that prevent their participation. Be with the children who are not able to run and play, but instead must put in a hard day's work to help their family afford to eat, to live. Be with us all, Christ Jesus, as we go about the busyness of our work. Hold us accountable not only for our actions, but most importantly to each of our neighbors. May we continue to work together to bring about your reign! We ask this in your holy name, through the power of the Holy Spirit. Amen.
